DESCRIPTION: Out-of-production 34-foot monohull; aft-cockpit; fiberglass masthead sloop from Beneteau. Formerly built in France. Also called the Beneteau 345. The Beneteau First 345 was designed as a moderate displacement racer/cruiser, and much of its popularity has been because of its success in blending the two functions. In fact, it could be said that the First is a racing boat that contains a cruising interior. The architect is Jean Berret, a Frenchman noted for his cruising and racing designs (he designed the 1985 Admiral's Cup winner, Phoenix, a Beneteau one-tonner). Within the Beneteau model line, the First series represents the performance-oriented designs. The fin keel and spade rudder of the 345, coupled with a shallow bottom, have minimal wetted surface. The keel comes in either a deep (6' 4") or shoal...
